

INTERNATIONAL CHARTERED MANAGER AWARD

LEE WAI LOON
Singapore Board Member

I wanted to study with an organisation that has a global recognition, and CMI was the only choice for me.

I wanted to be recognised in the job market for having the highest standard of management and leadership skills. After searching online, I quickly realised that CMI is the most globally recognised qualification, and it would help me to improve my reputation as having a high level of management skills.

I believe that becoming a Chartered Manager will help boost my career prospects. I see a great networking opportunity as a result of being qualified through CMI. Using the huge range of resources on ManagementDirect helped to improve my skills and be a better manager.

My current role involves implementing a lot of change management. The study resources within ManagementDirect have contributed to my understanding of how to perform world-class change management effectively, allowing me to excel in my role.

Chartered Manager status is recognised internationally, but there is opportunity for more. There are lots of Small Medium Enterprises (SMEs) in Asia that would hugely benefit from working with CMI, as they may not have any management programmes in place. The Continuing Professional Development (CDP) programme and ManagementDirect resources are the best I've seen, so I believe will be welcomed by companies here in Asia.

I am committed to ongoing professional development. I am keen to volunteer for mentoring opportunities, so that I can provide support and advice to the next generation of future managers and leaders."

Lee Wai Loon is the LSC APME Transformation Manager at Shell Eastern Trading in Singapore and is enjoying applying what he has learnt, explaining "CMI has given me the skills and confidence to support me in my current position, but also as I progress my career."
